The College of Charleston, founded in 1770 and chartered in 1785, is a comprehensive institution providing high-quality public education in the arts and sciences, education, and business. It functioned as an independent, non-denominational liberal arts college until 1837, when the City of Charleston began contributing to its upkeep, making it the first municipal college in the nation. In 1918, the College also began receiving support from the County of Charleston. The College returned to private status in 1949. Then during the 1970 session, the S.C. Legislature voted to add the College to the State's system of institutions of higher learning and it was officially transferred to state ownership, July 1, 1970. Effective July 1, 1992, under Act 272, the College established a new component for graduate programs and research grant studies, the Graduate School of the College of Charleston. The College is a member of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, the Association of American Colleges, and the American Council on Education. It is a charter member of the Southern University Conference and is on the approved list of the Association of American Universities and of the American Association of University Women. In accordance with Act 1393, 1972, Lander College became on July 1, 1973, a state-supported four-year institution. The university offers a variety of programs leading to baccalaureate degrees in the arts and sciences, an M.Ed. in elementary education, and an M.A.T. in art, English, and science. Lander University traces its origin to the establishment, in 1872, of an academy for young women, in Williamston, by Samuel Lander, a Methodist minister. Governance of the academy was assumed by the S.C. Conference of the Methodist Church in 1898. The academy was moved to Greenwood and renamed Lander College in 1904. In 1951, the County of Greenwood assumed operation of the College, the Methodist conference having discontinued its support. Under Act 272, 1992, Lander College became Lander University on July 1, 1992.
